POWER AND ECONOMY IN SUHARTO'S INDONESIA

by Richard Robison

This selection of articles spans a twelve-year period in the development of a new distinct approach to the question of political and economic in Indonesia. Confronting both the conservative and dependency orthodoxies, the central theme is that of a gradual maturing of capitalism, in which a capitalist class (indigenous, Chinese and foreign) grows in strength and influence in both the economic and political arenas. This process is set in the context of a changing international economy and the studies bring to bear the latest theoretical perspectives on class, state and power.
